MINOR LEAGUE BASEBALL PLAYERS GET LOW PAY

During the last few days minor league baseball players received the shocks of their careers when contracts arrived. To put it briefly, they discovered that the golden days are over, for the time being at any rate, and that the athletes will have to accept greatly reduced stipends on going into retirement.

For years the magnates, overly generous carried on despite financial distress, and continued to overpay their employees. Then came the inevitable era of retrenchment and the owners decided and agreed that such conditions must end. They are now going on the assumption that players are not worth any more than the amount they attract at the gate, and in taking this stand they cannot be severely criticized.

Ervin Braine, talented ex-Pittsburgh pitcher, was so amazed when the Toronto Leafs offered him $2500 for the season that he immediately put in a long distance call to his headquarters. He was quickly informed that he had been offered as high a salary as will be paid to any other player in the International League this coming season, and that the limit per month for any one club is $800.

Under the conditions, Mr. Braine should consider himself as being fortunate, but he doesn't and he has assumed local officials that he will not so effectively that he will force the Pittsburgh owners to recall him within two months. Dan Howley won't do any worrying about this statement, however, because he probably has made arrangements whereby Braine will have to linger here for at least a year.

It is a fact that many players were paid so much money in the past that they became egotistical and gave little in return. Glaring examples can be presented. Then, too, there is the other angle where players not paid enough in desperation delivered the goods in the hope that they would advance to a major league club. There are two sides to every story.

NOT A RECORD BY ANY MEANS

When Goalkeeper Earl Robertson of the Edmonton Eskimos registered his fourth consecutive shut-out Western series proclaimed that he had established an all-time record for professional hockey. Such, however, was far from being the case and that by several notches and a couple of miles.

As far as is known Paddy Byrne playing for the Kansas City Playboys, set the high water mark several years ago when he blanked opposing teams on seven successive occasions. Byrne is now performing in the Providence Team in the Canadian American League.

Alex Connell, now substitute net guard with Ottawa, twice turned in six consecutive shut-outs in 1929, and on each occasion

HEARD ON THE STREET

Aunt Prudence:— Keep away from the loud speaker, Mary. The announcer sounds as if he had a bad cold.

Teacher:— Give me an example of three punctuation marks.
Boy:— A comma is the brake that slows down the speed, an exclamation point is an accident, and a period is a hump.

Robinson:— Who was that man you just railed your hat to?
Green:— That Oh, that was my barber. He sold me a bottle of hair restorer a month ago, and when ever I used him I let him see what a fraud he is.

Mother:— Dorothy, you have disobeyed mother by racing around and making a noise, now you shall not have that piece of candy.

Father (entering a few minutes later): Why so quiet, little one?
Dorothy:— I've been fined for speeding.

He:— Who spilled mustard on this waffle deer?
She:— Oh John! How could you! This is lemon pie!

The old gentleman did not try to help his wife into their new car as he used to in the horse and buggy days.

You're not so gallant as when I was a girl, she told him.
No, he replied, and you are not so buoyant as when I was a boy.

His son was stopped by Gordon Duke, horse, now the playing manager of the Edmonton Eskimos. Keats, centre player with the Chicago Black Hawks, made the celebration gain once by racking up two goals in each engagement. To say the least, he rubbed it in.

Byrne, holder of the record, has never played in the National League. He received a tryout with the Montreal Maroons this season, but was finally turned aside. Two years ago Maroons would have signed him, but the war between the American League and the National was then at its height, and Byrne became the victim of circumstances. President Calder of the N H L just wouldn't sanction any dealings between the battling factions, and Byrne suffered as a result.

OPERATION IS PERFORMED ON FRANKIE BATTAGLIA

Rochester, Minn.— The fighting heart of Frankie Battaglia was beating him today from the shadow of serious illness just as it has carried him to many sensational pug battles. The black browed middle weight boxer from Winst peg operated on for appendicitis, was reported from hospital as progressing remarkably well.

It was said he would likely leave his hospital cot in ten days, though months must necessarily pass before he can resume his ring activities.

Bouquet with a string to it— Is it true Miss Elterleigh that you are going to get married soon?
Well, no it isn't. But I am very grateful for the rumor.

Sally:— These roosters kept me awake this morning with their crowing.
Brother Harold:— Don't blame the roosters. When you get up early, you know about it for a week.

Attorney for the Defense:— Have you ever been cross examined before?
The Witness:— Have I. I'm a married man.

Magistrate:— Why did you strike the post office clerk?
Defendant:— Well sir, I made 'im a telegram to send to my pal, and 'e starts reading it. So, of course, I ups and gives 'im one.

Young M D:— That jig is up.
Old M D:— What do you mean?
Young M D:— That fellow with St Vitus's dance did this morning.

ROOSEVELT WORK FOR RECIPROCITY

Hope springs eternal, and the latest news to revive drooping spirits has been the report of new trade relations with United States. If such negotiations were to result favorably, it would mean much to Canada as well as to the States.

It is hard to beat the geographical aspect in trade relations, and North America offers a great field for profitable reciprocal trade. The natural flow is north and south with markets accessible and the handicap of distance minimized. United States has many natural products which cannot be grown in this country. It has also a variety of manufactured goods which are desired by Canadian people. On the other hand there are Canada's exportable primary products, notably beef, milk and dairy products which in years gone by found ready market in the south and the sale of which constituted enormously to Canada's wealth. Unnatural trade barriers have worked hardship on both sides of the line.

The persistent rumor now is afloat that Mr. Roosevelt will lose no time in approaching Canada on the question of better trade relations. It would be very true to the advantage of United States to give trade concessions to this country. As for the natural reciprocity considerations, there is the debt question. Canada owes United States a sum which favors an annual interest payment of $250,000,000. There is the growing realization that the payment of Canada's obligations is dependent to a great extent on the volume of goods which she can place in United States. The past two years, with the difficulties of exchange, the consequent freezing of the tourist trade, the general reduction in purchasing power, the "Conference Agreement," have all, no doubt, brought home certain lessons to the self-contained nation to the south, as well as to Canada.

If the two countries can serve their own interests by lowering tariffs and conducting business in a more liberally fashion, there seems to be ground for hope that some agreement will be reached. To the Western Canadian and to the Eastern agriculturalist, a reciprocal arrangement with United States will appear as the first realization that the tide has turned.

SOMETHING DOING
WHEN AGNES GETS ANNOYED

In his weekly letter, Dr. Stanley touches in passing, on the day in Parliament, when Agnes McPhail told off her opponents. The Ottawa Journal tells the story more fully. There is no doubt that Agnes is a person who must raise very pronounced antagonism, either for or against. It is probably safe to say that not a man in the House of Commons shouted sit down, during her ranting speech.

The Ottawa Journal tells it: Miss Agnes McPhail, the one anomaly seldom loses her temper in the House of Commons, but when she does it's worth a trip to Parliament Hill to watch the fireworks. Thursday night saw the woman member indignantly refute imputations that the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation was linked with communism.

I am Canadian born, and I love Canada as much as any member who sits on the Government side, said Miss McPhail, her voice trembling with emotion. My record of service in this country is as clear as that of any member in any part of this House, and I do not propose any longer to sit here and allow people to put into our mouths things that we have never said and attribute to us motives that we have never had.

This business of continually trying to tie us up to Moscow is ridiculous. It is nonsense, said the woman member with vigor. It is a regular trick of the Conservative party. I remember when the Liberals were in power how the Conservatives were always saying that the fiscal policy of the Government was dictated from Washington. Now if the financial policy of this Government is not dictated by Wall Street, I should like to know who is dictating it.

The Conservatives are always trying to tie up those opposed to them with dictation from some place outside this country, continued Miss McPhail. I myself and the members of the United Farmers of Alberta and the Labor group in this House are Canadians. We are not tied up with Moscow and never have been. We are taking no orders and no money from Moscow. May I say to the honorable member for Toronto Northwest that we are striving by constitutional methods, by the exercise of our rights, which, thank God we possess—

The people of Canada know that the Conservative party has no corner on Canadianism, that it has no corner on loyalty to this country, that it has no corner on a desire to serve even though it means sacrifice, and it is about time Conservative party realized that. They have waved the flag and prostituted patriotism as no other group in Canada have done—we have heard it until we are sick of it—and when the flag won't do they take the Bible and wrap their policies in both. We have listened to altogether too much of that sort of thing.

THE inherent strength of life assurance has been tested and proved during the past three years of general business recession, and the invaluable service it renders the public in times of emergency fully demonstrated.

THE Sun Life of Canada, during this period—probably the most trying in human experience—has maintained its record of progress, and has been of especial service to its great body of policyholders throughout the world.

ITS assurances in force have increased since 1929 by $165,000,000; assets by $48,000,000. Its policyholders now number nearly a million.

The valuation of assets has been made on the basis prescribed for all companies by the Insurance Department of the Dominion of Canada.

Policy reserves have been valued by the full net level premium method, on bases more exacting than those required by the Insurance Act of the Dominion of Canada.

Applications for new assurances were received by the Company during 1932 at an average rate of more than $1,000,000 for every working day.

During 1932 the Company paid to policyholders and beneficiaries more than $560,000 for every working day.

Income from renewal premiums was the largest ever received by the Company in a single year.

Cash in repayment or reduction of policy loans exceeded in amount that of any previous year.

Revolutions of lapsed policies were in excess of those of any previous year, with one exception.

The net amount of policy proceeds left with the Company at interest was substantially increased.

of those who spoke advocates, however much more extreme than have ever found a place in Liberal platforms of the past. The chief subject of discussion was inflation. Many members believed the opposition should adopt a policy of inflation as one way out of the present depression. Others opposed such a course, believing the benefits of inflation to be entirely illusory. Hon. Ian MacKenzie, of Vancouver, is said to have been one of the most ardent proponents of inflation while the strongest opposition came from Edward Young of Vancouver.

The discussion ranged over the broad field of party policy and finally the caucus decided to submit the subject of financing a Liberal policy to a special committee. Several members of this committee were chosen, with the idea that the conscientious would select their chairman when a motion was put to caucus providing that any Liberal member be free to join the committee. This motion was carried and the committee will get down to work next week.

The caucus was absolutely unanimous on one point—the urgent need of removing tariffs and other barriers to international trade. The caucus decided unanimously to carry on the fight against the Bennett tariff in every way possible. Earlier in the proceedings there were some caustic references to the tariff board, arising largely out of a surprising attack on the personnel of the board, which appeared in the Montreal Gazette, one of the leading Conservative newspapers of the east. The Gazette's editors the board to severe criticism on the broad ground that the government failed to select men of adequate business experience. Attacking out that the board is regarded by Britain as the chief concession gained from Canada. Ottawa last summer the Gazette remarks that, the public here and in England are not to be blamed they look somewhat critically, in their personnel. There is always possibility of an agreeable surprise, the Gazette continues, but the present impression is one of sharp disillusionment and disappointment.

SCARLETT IS CRITICAL OF WOODSWORTH'S NEW COMMONWEALTH PARTY

Saskatoon.—Ridiculing J. S. Woodsworth's vision of a bloodless revolution and declaring that only an infantile mentality could believe in such a possibility, Sam Scarlett of the Canadian Labor Defence League at a farewell meeting told his audience that Woodsworth would ultimately prove the best defender of the capitalist system.

Mr. Scarlett stated that an act will be a short time in Winnipeg, in his denunciation of Canadian political leaders, Scarlett scored Premier Bennett and Rt. Hon. W. M. McKenzie King, stating they were two labels for the same bottle, and Woodsworth, he asserted was merely Bennett in a new guise. The C. C. F. parliamentary leader might have an attempt to give the little fellow a dog's chance, whereas Bennett's defence of the capitalist system was rather too crude for Woodsworth, who wanted to put a little refinement into it.

Mr. Scarlett admitted a certain degree of freedom existed in Canada. He could safely criticize Mr. Bennett or Mr. King, or even the Liberals and Conservatives, but the man who attacked the shop working hours or working conditions would soon find himself in the penitentiary, he said.
